The Board of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting recognizes the extraordinary contributions of Patricia Cahill.

She brought a wealth of experience, leadership and wisdom from a public media career spanning more than four decades to her distinguished tenure on the CPB Board. Having served as a reporter, producer, program director, news director, general manager, NPR board member, and President of Public Radio in Mid America, she effectively communicated the needs and views of public radio stations. She was a tireless advocate of public media's mission of ensuring universal access to high-quality content and services, over-the-air and online.

We mark the end of her second term of service on the CPB Board of Directors with respect, admiration, and gratitude.
